An attack on Defoe's "History of the union..." ostensibly by friend of James Clark, Presbyterian

It is a very common mistake to suppose that the ancient Egyptians were a people of great intelligence and refinement. In fact, they were a very barbarous and ignorant people, who lived in a state of nature, and were governed by a few tyrants. Their religion was a mixture of superstition and magic, and their arts and sciences were very imperfect. They were a very warlike people, and were often at war with their neighbors. They were a very superstitious people, and believed in many gods and goddesses. They were a very ignorant people, and knew very little of the world around them. They were a very barbarous people, and were often cruel to their slaves and captives.
